IN RUINS.

Two Theatrical Buildings and Numerous Business Houses in Columbus Burned.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 26.—At 7.45 this morning fire started in the third story of the J. N. Godman factory, in the Metropolitan Opera house block, and because of the delay in sending in an alarm the handsome and costly block was enveloped in flames quite beyond the power of the fire department to control. The whole block, from Fifth street to Walnut, and from High to Pearl, will be a total loss. Among the business concerns in the block are: A. Z. Weiner, drug store; Stellen & Husser, wholesale liquor store; H. A. Barcus, grocery; H. & N. Gundersheimer, clothing; Halliday & Higgins, shoes; J. N. Godman, leather and shoes; Sloan's cafe; Seibert & Lille, bookbinders; Dr. Evans, R. S. Star's dispensary; State A. Morton, dry goods; Gazette Printing company; L. M. Baker's art gallery, and the Metropolitan Opera house, the oldest and finest in the city. The loss will probably reach $500,000. Little can be ascertained as to the insurance, though most of it is probably covered. The fire is not yet concentrated, and it is quite difficult to see how any of the block can be saved.

The fire is now under control and was confined to the Metropolitan opera house block. The south third of the block was owned by a Philadelphia capitalist, J. A. Jeffery, who is represented here by Walter Morrison. His loss is $50,000, insured for $35,000. Isaac Eberley owns the central third including the Metropolitan opera house. His loss is $75,000, insured for $53,000. George Foster owns the north third of the block. His loss is $40,000.

"NOT THAT I KNOW OF."

Such Was Secretary Blaine's Answer to the Question, "Has Chili Acquiesced to Our Demands."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—As Secretary Blaine was entering the white house at noon to attend the cabinet meeting, he was asked if any response had yet been made to the demand upon Chili. His answer was "Not that I know of."

The telegram from Santiago printed this morning, saying that Chili had decided to apologize and that a confirmation would reach Washington today or tomorrow was read with much satisfaction by all classes of people in Washington and everywhere the hope was expressed that the report was true, and that hostilities might be avoided. While every one, or nearly every one, favors a vigorous policy and sustains President Harrison in the position taken in the message, no one wants to punish Chili simply as a means of showing the power of the United States. Senator Blount, chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, speaking of the telegram to a United Press reporter, said that if the country could stand anything it certainly could stand a reference of the case to the supreme court. If the report be true it is the second instance within a short time when a foreign country had put itself upon record as being willing to trust the decision of questions affecting its interests to the supreme court. In the Sayward case recently, it will be remembered that the English government, instead of resorting to the usual channel of diplomacy, brought the case into the supreme court.

No authentic corroboration has yet been had of the report from Santiago announcing that Chili had agreed to withdraw the offensive Matta note and was willing to submit the question of indemnity to the United States supreme court for decision. Inquiry at the war and navy departments this morning elicited the reply that nothing had been received there. If such a dispatch had been received by the state department it would immediately be sent to the secretary of the navy. Secretary Tracy says he had received nothing from the state department, but did receive a cipher dispatch from Commander Evans last night announcing the fact that the Yorktown had landed the refugees. Inquiry at the residence of Secretary Blaine was met with the statement that he had nothing to communicate. It is probable that if the secretary is in possession of a communication from Minister Egan that he will lay it before the cabinet meeting at noon before giving it to the press.

Minister Montt was seen as he was emerging from the Chilian legation this morning by a United Press reporter, who approached him for news. Minister Montt declined to be interviewed and would express no opinion on the president's message or the manner in which it had been received by the American people. He was asked if he had received advices from his government to the effect that Chili had agreed to the demands made by the United States. He replied that he had received no dispatches from Chili. The minister showed no disposition to discuss Chilian affairs and the subject was changed to the heavy wind that prevails in Washington this morning. With a pleasant smile the minister said that Chili did not have such cold, hard winds, but that the climate was balmy and soft. As the steps of the minister led him toward the residence of Secretary Blaine, he was asked if he was going to call upon that official this morning and he disclaimed any such intention. He, however, turned into the street leading to Mr. Blaine's house and the state department and upon exchanging salutes the envoy and minister plenipotentiary and the reporter separated.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—There were half empty galleries in the senate chamber today. Just before the hour of meeting struck, the sonorous voice of Senator George, of Mississippi, was heard all over the chamber remarking: "Well, there is no war cloud, after all." This feeling met a prompt echo from the senators and was emphasized by that of the public. The chaplain in his opening prayer made an earnest supplication for righteousness and peace to spread over the land and returned thanks for the "forbearance, kindness, wisdom, discretion and prudence" vouchsafed and for the "rolling away of the cloud of darkness." He implored that the people of the United States might become a pattern people."

Mr. Hoar called attention to the duplicate printing of the president's message in both the house and senate proceedings and moved that in future whenever such a message was printed in the proceedings of the house and senate, it should not be printed in both reports. This was agreed upon.

HOUSE.

There were few people in the galleries and not over 150 members present when the house convened. The chaplain, in his prayer, gave thanks for the recovery of the speaker.

A bill was passed relieving the university of Missouri from responsibility for an ordinance issued to it and destroyed by fire.

Mr. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, introduced a resolution requesting the president to inform the house whether any answer had been received from Minister Egan or the Chilian government to the dispatches of our government to Chili of January 21st, and if so, from whom, when it was received and also to communicate to the house all the correspondence of the Chilian trouble not already communicated. Adopted.

Breckenridge addressed the house on his resolution and said that it appeared possible that the government of Chili had sent an answer to the dispatch repeated in the president's message. He criticised the president for sending his message to congress before an answer to his dispatch was received. He did not think this criticism was too harsh in face of the facts, and had he not had some intimation what the dispatch was, he would not have sent in a message couched in such language. It was scarcely creditable that the language so severe, used by him, would have been used if he had believed it possible that a friendly and sufficient response would have been made to his dispatch of January 21. He may have had some intimation of what the answer would be and yet it may have been received by him in a secret manner which justified him in not putting it in his message. [Applause.] The message in question has been placed in the hands of congress and the duty has been imposed upon us to declare war if the facts justified any such step. The honor and dignity of the American people should be upheld. There was no man in this house who would not protect the humblest seaman who wears the American uniform or the honor or glory of the American people. (Loud applause.) The honor and safety of the American seamen would be safe in the hands of this congress. War is a last resort. We should not be hasty. We should know all the facts.

The house committee of foreign affairs held a special meeting this morning and began the discussion of the Chilian situation as set forth in the president's message of yesterday. The correspondence relative to the matter was presented to the members in printed form and with the president's message was laid before the committee by Chairman Blount. The correspondence forms quite a volume and as it is new to the committee, it will be carefully gone over and considered by it before any definite action on the matter is taken.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Jan. 26.—The Derby and Shelton board of trade, at its annual meeting last night, rejected by a vote of 23 to 2 the resolution transmitted from the New York board of trade and transportation, urging that the Chilian trouble be submitted to arbitration. In opposing the resolution A. W. Haige, speaker of the house, said: "We are regarded by other countries as weak and pusillanimous and it was time to assert our dignity and strength."

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Although the president's message to congress had not been generally read last night, those who had seen it spoke favorably of it. There was a feeling among the majority of those who talked on the subject that Chili should be made to apologize for the insult to the American flag, if the information that had been made public was correct. "If the United States have war with Chili, it will be a long one," said Lieut. Fletcher Bassett, a retired naval officer, last night. "I believe there will be war, and have offered my services; and I sincerely hope they will be required. It would be a long fight, but would result in a victory for the United States. Chili, I think, will not back down. She has been procrastinating and she needs time for this reason. Here French made vessels are not completed, and at present Valparaiso harbor is too comfortable for foreign vessels. When fleet meets fleet the action will be quick, decisive and destructive. They will go each other four or five miles distant and firing will immediately begin, and as they approach they will try to ram or torpedo us. Our fleet will, I think, be victorious, and then will come the withdrawal of the natives to their mountains. Then begins the chase and how long it will last nobody knows. Peru will probably be friendly and her shores will offer a good landing place for our troops.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Globe this afternoon, referring to President Harrison's message to congress, says that it is more humorous than tragic, that it is marked with the noble stamp of spread-eagleism, and that it makes the poorest case a nation ever put forward. "America and Chili," the Globe adds, "have no better means of hurting one another than Bismarck's whale and elephant. Chili's fighting ships," the Globe continues, "are equal to America's, though there only can be one possible ending to the affair in the long run, and Senor Montt, therefore, will be well advised if he takes the look."

The St. James Gazette says there is no creditable reason why the United States should have fixed the quarrel upon Chili. No just ground existed for sending the ultimatum to Chili. The concessions made by Chili deprive the United States of all justification for bullying. Had America been represented at Santiago by a gentleman of the stamp of Phelps, Lincoln or Dana the bother would never came about.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—The newspapers of this city do not comment today upon the trouble between Chili and the United States and the message does not attract much interest here. Some newspapers yesterday were divided in their opinion of President Harrison's action, but it was thought it would be a bloodless quarrel.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Minister Lincoln and the Chilian minister both had interviews with Lord Salisbury today. Mr. Falconer, secretary of the Armstrong's, says it is not true that Chili has purchased or is treating for a cruiser built by that concern.

THE CABINET MEETS.

President Harrison Calls His Secretaries About Him to Discuss the Chilian Situation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The cabinet met promptly at 11:30 this morning, all the members being present except Secretaries Foster and Elkins. Secretary Blaine was a little late in arriving. To a reporter of the United Press Secretary Blaine said, just as he was entering the cabinet meeting, that no reply that he had heard of had been received from the Chilian government to the demand of the United States. No confirmation of the Santiago dispatch has been received this morning and in no official quarter is the dispatch credited. Postmaster general Wanamaker said this morning that war was no nearer today than it was last week. He had not, he said, heard that Chili had replied to the United States. He intimated that after the meeting of the cabinet he would be more familiar with the situation. The cabinet session lasted until after 1 o'clock and was devoted almost wholly to the discussion of the Chilian situation. At 1 p. m. the cabinet meeting adjourned. Every member present was asked if a reply had been received from Chili, and every one, as though concertedaction had been determined upon, declined to answer.

President Harrison was asked about the matter, but sent word that he would not say anything on the subject. Mr. Blaine, who before the cabinet met, had stated that "no reply had been heard of or had been received from Chili," after the cabinet meeting would not even repeat or confirm his former statement. It is the general belief, based on the best obtainable information, that Chili has not yet replied to the ultimatum of the United States.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 26.—The senate unanimously adopted a resolution offered by Gatch endorsing the president's Chilian message.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—The Chilian minister said today he was not aware that Chili had made a surrender in the trouble with the United States. He did not regard war as probable.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—The Chilian cruiser, Presidente Pinto, is in Granville Roads at Havre, half manned and ready to start. The Capitan Prat will not be in condition to sail before April.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—The foreign editors of the Journal des Debats, Figaro, Republique, Siecele, Gaulois and Eclair, have assured a correspondent of the United Press that they believe there will be no war between the United States and Chili. These assurances were given previous to the receipt here of the cable message to the effect that Chili had practically made a full apology to the United States. The Paris newspapers, however, do not comment on the Chilian troubles.

A FALSE REPORT.

The American Building and Loan Association Not a Failure.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 26.—The statement that the American Building and Loan association has failed or had been wound up by the state bank examiner is without foundation. The examiner, in his report filed yesterday, found that the association was solvent and had a real surplus of about $161,000. He criticised some of the investments of the association, but made no recommendations to the government whatever.

He was born in Leeds, Maine, in 1835, and was a brother of Major General Howard, commanding the division of Atlantic. Dr. Howard leaves a widow and five children.

RUSSIA'S PERIL.

Nihilists Take Advantage of the Famine to Incite Revolt.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Advices have been received from St Petersburg that the powers of several governors of Russian provinces have been increased to the extent of allowing them to declare martial law. This is to meet the dangerous machinations of the nihilists, who are taking advantage of the sufferings of the peasants from the famine to incite them to revolt.

TWO TRAGEDIES.

A Deputy Sheriff and an Outlaw Shot—Kentucky Men Have a Fatal Duel.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 26.—Yesterday morning, in Claiborne county, near Cumberland Gap, Deputies Thompson and Williams attempted to arrest two outlaws and horse thieves. A desperate running fight occurred and one of the outlaws was shot from his horse. After he fell he took deliberate aim and shot Deputy Thompson through the heart. The other outlaw was then captured, together with the fellow who had been wounded. The body of the dead deputy and the two prisoners were taken to Cumberland Gap. Both outlaws are strangers in the locality. Telegrams received here at midnight state that a mob was preparing to lynch the outlaws.

SOMERSET, Ky., Jan. 26.—The particulars of the killing on Sunday of John Desarm by John Newsley have just come to hand. Newsley and some friends were passing along Goose creek, when a shot was fired at them from the opposite side of the creek, where they saw John Desarm slighting from and getting behind his table. Desarm fired another shot, but did not harm anybody. Newsley, who was armed with a needle gun, then fired at Desarm, the bullet going through the lung and penetrating the heart of Desarm, killing him instantly. Newsley then went to Manchester and gave himself up. There had been a feud between the two men for many years.

HON. MASON J. NIBLACK.

The Democratic Candidate for Governor Chats Pleasantly on Politics.

Hon. Mason J. Niblack, of Vincennes, who is a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, was in the city yesterday and today, leaving this afternoon for Columbus City.

He is making an active canvass of the state in his own interests and while here was met by a number of our leading democrats. Mr. Niblack is a young man of brilliant abilities and has already made a notable record for himself as a politician, having been a member of the Indiana house for the last three terms, during the last two of which he was the speaker of that body.

"How is the political kettle moving?" asked Tom Costello together, who met Mr. Niblack last evening.

"Pretty lively" was the reply, "I have been in a number of the counties during the last few weeks and in all of them I find the people taking considerable interest in regard to the coming political campaign."

"How do you think Indiana is going to go this year?"

"Democratic, of course," was the quick response, "but we ought not to be over confident. The victory can't be won without an effort. Indiana will be fighting ground for both of the parties, and if the democrats expect to capture it in the coming gubernatorial and presidential campaign we must be up and doing."

"Who will be the democratic nominee for president?"

"That I couldn't say. I should like to see some western democrat at the head of the ticket."

"How about the issues?"

"The campaign will be fought on the issue of tariff reform. I am an enthusiastic tariff reformer and believe that the democracy ought to hold the republicans down to a fair and square fight on this issue and not allow them to dodge it. The people of this country are not for the McKinley tariff bill and they will put their veto on it at the coming elections."

"Who are making a canvass for the democratic nomination for governor besides yourself?" was asked.

"Well, the only pronounced candidates in the field at present are Mortimer J. Nye, of LaPorte, and John G. Shanklin, of Evansville. Col. Matson and Congressman Bynum are also spoken of frequently."

"Isn't Secretary of the State Claude Matthews in the race also?"

"Well, I think not. He told me at Indianapolis the other day that he would be a candidate again for secretary of the state."

"And the balance of the ticket?"

"All the present incumbents will be candidates for renomination. I don't know who will be nominated for lieutenant governor. Sydney R. Moon and W. R. Myers will contest for the office of reporter of the supreme court."

"Who are the republicans talking of for governor?"

"Oh! they have a long list. Let me see. I don't know whether I could name them all. There is Gov. Chase, Clem Studebaker, of South Bend, Smiley N. Chambers, of Knox county, Stanton J. Peelle, C. W. Fairbanks, John L. Griffith and Gov. A. G. Porter, all of Marion; Chas. F. Griffin of Lake county; John H. Baker, of Goshen, and Col. R. S. Robertson, of your city."

In reference to the talk of changing the date of holding the democratic state convention Mr. Niblack said that April 14, the day selected, came in a week that was one of religious services in the Catholic and Lutheran churches and was perhaps unfortunate in that respect. He hardly thought the date would be changed upon by the state committee. April 14 is the anniversary of Mr. Niblack's birthday and if he should be so fortunate as to secure the democratic nomination for governor the day would be one of double rejoicing to him. Mr. Niblack was one of the field officers of the state military encampment which was held in the city last summer and is quite well acquainted here.

ARABI PASHA.

The Exiled Egyptian Ruler, Lives a Life of Luxurious Ease Upon the Island of Ceylon.

COLOMBO, CEYLON, Jan. 26.—The correspondent of the United Press, who has been in China during the progress of the rebellion there, has arrived here on his return journey. The correspondent this morning had an interview with Ahmed Arabi, otherwise known as Arabi Pasha, the Egyptian leader who caused so much trouble to the British in 1881 and 1882 and who is now in exile here. Arabi Pasha looks much older than he would be expected to look after the lapse of only ten years from the time he figured so prominently before the world. In fact, he may be said to have aged twenty years in the ten years he has passed in banishment upon this island. Though the distinguished exile cannot leave Ceylon, this Egyptian Napoleon cannot be said to be unconfortable upon his St Helena. He is well housed, well fed, well dressed and well attended upon; he has all reasonable luxuries at his disposal and wanders almost when and where he pleases. But he is a prisoner, though his cage is a gilded one and in spite of the fact that his captivity is made as pleasant as possible. As a somewhat curious coincidence this interview between the traveling correspondent and the exile of Egypt took place on the anniversary of the death of General Gordon and the fall of Khartoum.

THE SWINDLER ON TRIAL.

Muskgrave, Who Hid a Skeleton in a Cabin, Then Burned the Building.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 26.—Muskgrave, who tried to swindle the insurance companies by burning a log cabin with a human skeleton inside of it, was, with his "pal," Charley Trout, placed on trial here yesterday. The defense offered a plea of abatement, and it was discussed all the day, the judge announcing that he would decide the question tomorrow. The plea sets up that as Muskgrave had been extradited by the authorities of this state from the state of Minnesota on a charge of "conspiracy to defraud an underwriter," he could not be compelled to answer to any other charge. The present indictment against him is: "For conspiracy to obtain money from an insurance company by false pretenses."

The first grand jury indictment returned was against Muskgrave and Trout jointly "for conspiracy to defraud an underwriter." It was upon this indictment that the governor of Indiana, by requisition, demanded of the governor of Minnesota that Muskgrave be turned over, which was done. Later, after Muskgrave was incarcerated in the jail here, the grand jury found an other indictment against him and Trout jointly "for conspiracy to obtain money from an insurance company by false pretenses."

SHORT OF WATER.

By a Change of the River's Channel Columbus is Imperiled.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Jan. 26.—By a change in the channel of the river in front of the water works here the supply in the well, in case of fire, would be exhausted by three streams in fifteen minutes. A wing dam was thrown out to direct the water down the section pipe, but by inattention on the part of the water works trustees the water has cut a way around the end, through which four-fifths of the river flows. There is considerable anxiety.

KNIGHTSTOWN, Ind., Jan. 26—Last Saturday a man giving his name as Jacob O. M. Thomas, residing seven miles north of this city, presented a letter of credit at the First National bank purporting to have been written by Wesley Williams, a wealthy farmer north of here. The letter requested the bank to let the bearer have as much money as he wanted. He was refused the money, however, and was told to have a note made out and properly signed. He appeared at the bank this afternoon with the note made out for $875, but the signature of Mr. Williams having been spelled wrong the man was promptly arrested on the charge of forgery. The atmosphere was pretty "chilly" this morning.

The New York Herald says that Governor Hill will have a solid delegation from that state to the national democratic convention.

The democratic state central committee has been summoned to meet at Indianapolis tomorrow, presumably to make a change in the day of holding the convention.

The friends of Colonel Chauncy B. Oakley, of this city, are urging him to allow his name to be presented to the republican convention as a candidate for auditor of state.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, the national bard of Scotland. His countrymen in this city did appropriate honor to the great poet's memory.

In case of a war with Chili the south would prove her loyalty to the American flag. A war with any foreign power would forever efface the line which has long separated the south from the north.

The republican state central committee will meet at Indianapolis Thursday to determine the time and place of holding the republican state convention. An effort will be made to bring the convention to this city.

Not a few of the Jewish rabbis in this country are in favor of changing the day of synagogue worship from the Mosaic Sabbath to the Christian Sunday. The Baltimore American recently collected the opinions of the rabbis of that city on the subject and it was found that they differ in their views regarding it, though the strictly orthodox rabbis there as elsewhere are opposed to the change. Perhaps the most remarkable of all the arguments on the side of the Sunday party was made by the president of the Hebrew Temple Congregation, who built his doctrine upon the laws of astronomy and upon the bible, and who closed his discourse by saying "I firmly believe that a Saturday Sabbath is the millstone around the neck of prophetic Judaism."

The message of President Harrison to congress regarding Chilian affairs was an able and exhaustive discussion of the points at issue between the two governments. It assumes an aggressive, if not a warlike attitude and takes the position that unless Chili apologize she accepts the responsibility for the wanton attack made upon the American colors of the Baltimore, and make proper amends for it. It is probable that Chili will make an apology. There is neither glory nor profit for the United States in a war with Chili and there should be none until arbitration has utterly failed to accomplish an adjustment of these difficulties. Congress, with whom the matter rests, will act considerately and wisely, and while preserving the honor of the United States will avert a declaration of war if possible.

The recent census in India gives prominence to the fact that the greatest numerical growth of population in that land in the past decade has been among the native Christians. The London Times deems a leader to the important result and says that the native Christians are found by the official returns to be increasing at a rate unknown among any other class—at a rate more than four times higher than the population of India as a whole. In the countries for this it says: "The native Christian community is, as a rule left for looked after in childhood better educated in youth, better treated in sickness, more promptly aided during scarcity and more correctly disciplined through life. Why? we ask. And we answer. Because Christianity teaches the worth and dignity of the individual. A study of the comparative value of religions is both interesting and disheartening. Infidels and agnostics are fond of asserting that Buddhism, Confucianism and Mohammedanism equal Christianity in some respect and surpass it in others. But it is noteworthy that while asserting this they are careful to remain in Christendom instead of emigrating to India, China or Turkey.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY.

Paul Mossman Writes an Interesting Letter From Leipzig, Saxony.

Leipzig, Saxony Jan 1 1882

Ed Sentinel: The loveliest month on earth is a man on a foreign land far away from home at Christmas time. Let him smell the wall-power he has to fight the strange lonely feeling that creep over him yet it is of no avail. Let him seek to distract his lonely thoughts amid the gay festivities of society still there will come to him the thought of the pleasures at home and for the moment his face will wear a lonely, sorrowful look, which plainly tells the keen observer that the outward happy appearance is only a mask. But there is no reason why a person in Germany at Christmas time should abut home. Upon his room he has his head upon his desk and allow those feelings to make this season of rejoicing and festivity a more miserable one to him. Christmas is the greatest holiday of all the year in Germany and no effort is spared to make it the happiest both to the family head and to the stranger within the gates.

For many weeks before Christmas the handsome store windows are filled with the most gorgeous displays of holiday goods. Booths of all kinds are set up in the open market squares, and here peasants, fakirs and traveling salesmen display their wares and do a big business. The narrow streets in the evenings are crowded from one side to the other. Everybody is busy buying Christmas presents. The custom of giving money and expensive gifts is carried to an extreme here. The idea that mutually follows such a custom is to give an expensive present in order to get a more expensive one in return. Our poor, hard working Fraulein showed us a handsomely inlaid cigar case with a musical arrangement attached. She said it cost thirty marks, and said it was intended for a young "militar," who, she had heard, was going to give her a present worth fifty marks. I am glad to say that our little Fraulein was not disappointed. But there seems to be such a universal hearty good-will and pleasure in the exchange of so many gifts, that one can not think that the selfish, mercenary motive enters in to mar the spirit of the truth, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Every family in Germany and in many families every person of the household has a Christmas tree. Just a week before Christmas evergreens of all sizes began to make their appearance in Leipzig. In one day the great open square, the August-us Platz, was converted into a veritable pine forest. I saw it estimated in the Tageblatt that it would take 240000 trees to supply Leipzig alone. Every family, no matter how poor it may be, must have its Christbaum, or it will have no Christmas. On the two days previous to the great holiday it seemed to me as I walked down the streets that nearly every man, woman and child was carrying home a Christmas tree. The pleasure and excitement shown by every member of the family in the work of decorating the tree makes one wish that we had such a universal custom in America. It is surprising to think of the great amount of cheerful sunshine one little Christmas tree can bring into a home.

Early Christmas morning at half-past eight o'clock we attended the services in the St. Thomas kirche. It was a magnificent sight to see the large troops of soldiers march into the old church in their full military dress. Two large Christmas trees were lighted and then the beautiful chorus, "Ehre sei Gott inder Hohe, und Friede auf Erden, und den Menschen ein Wohlgefallen," was sung by the choir above the audience, so that for a moment we seemed to be transported into a paradise and into the very presence of the heavenly angels themselves. The chorus and orchestral music of that Christmas morning was sublime. Leipzig is perhaps the greatest musical center in Germany and the kirchenmusik given here every Sunday morning at the Thomas kirche is considered the finest church music in the world. The afternoon of this warm, sunny Christmas day was spent in promenading through the beautiful parks and forests of the suburbs of the city. In the evening Wagner's magnificent opera, "Lohengrin," most fittingly closed this most beloved of German holidays.

One day for Christmas is not sufficient for the Germans, so the two following days are called the second and third Weihnachtsfest, and they are celebrated in a similar manner to the first Christmas. The stores are all closed. The Ross Platz, the Augustus Platz and the magnificent avenue, An Der Pleisse, are crowded with pedestrians. The opera houses and great concert halls have two or three programs during the day. All business is laid aside and everything gives place to the gayety and pleasures of the three Christmas holidays.

Sylvester Abend, the evening before New Years is celebrated in a peculiarly German fashion. You will send dom find in Leipzig a drunken man, but on Sylvester Abend it is the unfortunate custom to drink more than usual with the purpose of becoming decidedly drunk just about midnight. The streets are then crowded and the young fellows amuse themselves by stealing or smashing as many hats as they can. From the hour of midnight till the early dawn the cry of "Prost Neu Jahr" Prost Neu Jahr" is heard all over the city. We were fortunate enough to be present at a small Sylvester Abend party of young people given by our amiable host, Herr Pe-s-. We were entertained in the usual German hospitable manner. As the chance of all the bells in the city rang in the new year, the health of all was drank and the best wishes were given for the year of 1882. The first two hours of the year were then spent in eating "pfeffer-kuchen" and cracking nuts and German jokes. I am sorry to say that I failed to catch the point of many of the jokes, but of course the pain was there so I did not fail to laugh as heartily as the rest of the company. Unfortunately I sprung an American joke upon the merry crowd and it fell flat. Not a smile from one of the pretty German maidens—nothing except a loud, ha! ha! from my American-born Yankee countrymen—it not appreciated by the German youth. All my jokes hereafter will be on the German jokes.

New Years day was dark and rainy. It was spent mainly I think, in recovering from the effect of the dissipation of Sylvester Abend. In the day after New Years the Reuss, one of the annual Leipzig fairs was inaugurated. The New Years Messe is a very small affair when compared with the great Messe which take place at Easter and in August. These fairs are attended by merchants from Russia and Turkey and Greece besides many from all over Germany. The market squares are covered with booths and the articles displayed for sale are mostly cloths, furs and leather.

I should like to tell you some of the many experiences some of my American friends and myself have had here in Leipzig, and also something of the common every day German life in Germany, but time and space forbid. There are about two hundred Americans in this city and we have American church services every Sunday afternoon in the Ester Burger Schule. Our pastor, Rev Edwards is an excellent man and preacher, and his services are among the people of this little American colony are greatly appreciated. But I shall leave the particular joys and sorrows of the Americans in Leipzig until another time.

MRS. BILL'S SHOPPING.

After Spending Three Hours in Rushing at Rockers She Goes Home Without Selecting One.

Mrs. Billus (at furniture store) If you hadn't such a large stock I think I could have made a selection an hour ago. But this Mr. Billus is no partic-ular. What do you say to the "set of thirteen?"

Salesman (who has been engaged all the morning in trying to sell a no-king chair to Mrs Billus—Twenty five dollars, ma'am.

Mrs Billus (making up her mind at last) Well, I think I'll. Why, how do you do, Mrs McSwat! I am trying to buy something as a surprise for Mr. Billus, and I have about decided to take this chair It is just the thing as well as anything I can think of, and—

Mrs. McSwat (who has just happened to come in)—What is the price of it?

Mrs. Billus—Only twenty five dollars. It seems like a high price, but when you look at the trimmings and the way it's made—

Mrs. McSwat—Twenty five dollars! My land! Why, that would —

Mrs Billus (to salesman)—Is that the very best you'll take for it?

Salesman—It is, m'am; and that's a discount of 10 p-r cent.

Mrs Billus (re-solutely)—I hardly know what to do. I can't think of it, Mrs. McSwat!

Mrs McSwat—My husband likes a wide, old fashioned chair, with a cane seat and low backers—one that leans away back, you know.

Mrs Billus—Doesn't he complain that he is always getting lint on the back of his coat from the tidy? That's the way with—Why, good morning, Mrs. Whackster!

Mrs. Whackster (happening in)—Good morning, Mrs Billus! How do you do, Mrs McSwat? Making a purchase?

Mrs Billus—Yes I am about to buy a rocking chair.

Mrs Whackster—For your husband?

Mrs. Billus—Yes. How do you like this one?

Mrs. Whackster—What do they ask for it?

Mrs Billus—Twenty five dollars. I don't think it's worth it. Do you?

Mrs. Whackster—I don't know. Mr. Whackster likes a leather covered chair, with a low seat—one of the stationary rockers, you know, with casters on the bottom.

Mrs. Billus (to salesman)—Have you any of that kind?

Salesman (beating wearily against a bureau)—Yes, ma'am. I showed you one of those when you first came in.

Mrs. McSwat—Why don't you get one of those folding chairs? (To salesman.) What's the price of this one?

Salesman—Thirty five dollars.

Mrs. McSwat—That's too much money to put in a chair. If I were in your place, Mrs. Billus, I should— Good morning, Mrs. Shadbolt! Did you see us through the front window?

Mrs. Shadbolt—Yes. That's why I dropped in. Buying something?

Mrs. McSwat—Mrs. Billus is buying a rocking chair for her husband. Shall-inks this one here—

Mrs Shadbolt—I don't like that one at all. What is the price of it?

Mrs Billus—They ask twenty-five dollars for it.

Mrs. Shadbolt—If I were buying one for my husband I should get it of antique oak, with a carved back, an embroidered cushion, upholstered arms, and—

Mrs Billus (to salesman)—Have you any of that kind?

Salesman (becoming very tired)—Yes, ma'am. Will you one like that for $9.50.

Mrs. Billus I don't know. I expected to spend about fifteen dollars for one. Haven't you something different from any of these?

Salesman—Yes, ma'am we have a line of chairs in the other end of the room that we got at a bankrupt sale. I can sell you the best lot for fifteen dollars. It was marked twenty-five dollars.

Mrs. Billus—Then I'll take a look at—But isn't it shabby?

Salesman—Not a bit. Just as good as—

Mrs. McSwat—There's something wrong with it, or else they wouldn't be—

Mrs. Shadbolt—If it is that tall, straight backed chair over here. What's it worth?

Salesman (in a hollow voice)—Sell that one for thirteen dollars It cost fifteen dollars

Mrs. Whackster (decidedly)—Then it's out of style. Mrs. Billus, if I were you I'd get a nice leather covered rocker bushwood you awhile ago

Mrs. Billus—What did you say was the price of that leather covered rocker?

Salesman (shifting his weight on the other foot)—Sixteen dollars.

Mrs. Billus—Well, I think I'll—But you don't think it isn't suit Mr. Billus. Would you take it back?

Salesman—We'd allow you to exchange it for one of course.

Mrs. Whackster—Yes, and when you came to look for another one you would find the stock all picked over and nothing you would suit.

Mrs. Billus (after some moments spent in reflection)—I don't see anything that suits me better than the one I picked out a little while ago. Can't you take less than twenty five dollars for it?

Salesman (desperately)—Yes, ma'am. I'll let you have it for $22.50.

Mrs. Billus (as the result of a whispered conference with the other ladies)—I don't think I'll make any purchase this morning.

[Exit Mrs. Billus, followed by Mrs. McSwat, Mrs. Whackster and Mrs. Shadbolt.]

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

The Trials of a Station Agent as Told by One of Them—Local and Personal News.

"I always enjoy a chat with railroaders," said the match peddler as he took a seat near the stove in the ticket receiver's office one morning last week.

"I once entertained a notion that I was cut out for a railway man myself, but a little experience in that line dispelled the delusion. You know there are some things that a sensative, timid man can't endure, and chief among them is railroading. My uncle Bill was once a passenger conductor on a railway back east and but for a little incident would have today owned the road and been a bloated millionaire. There were no spotters in those palmy days; neither had that horrid wretch, the ticket receiver, yet appeared on the scene."

Here Conductor Benedict, who was at work on his report, was suddenly reminded of the emptiness of his match box, and he laid in a supply for the ensuing twelve months. Dr. Kells winked at John Rose as the latter replenished his depleted match box from the abundant store of Mr. Benedict, while Mr. Baker stalked to the door to cool his fevered brow.

"Yes, those were palmy days for the ambitious conductor and my uncle possessed that trait to a remarkable degree. In less than six months he owned the finest residence in the city and was negotiating for a college at the sea shore. But his fat job was short lived. One day the conductors and ticket agents had a little misunderstanding concerning dividends, which ended in a rate war."

"How did that effect the conductors?" asked Conductor McMahon.

"Why, the agents and conductors got to cutting rates and soon reduced the receipts to such a figure that after they got their share of the earnings there was nothing left for the company. Well, the officials kicked and some changes followed. Uncle Bill came west, bringing me with him. We located in Illinois and soon after I went to work in a railroad telegraph office. When sufficiently versed in telegraphy I applied to the superintendent for a job and was assured I would be given the first vacancy. Then I waited. One day the superintendent sent for me and said my services were required at Coesse, where I was to relieve the station agent for a few days. A pass was thrust into my hands and I was told to get aboard No. 25, which was about to pull out. I hastened on the train and from that minute up to the time I severed my connection with the road life was a burden to me.

"This train don't stop at Coesse, young fellow," said Conductor Blakesley and he took up my pass and punched on his rounds. Here was a dilemma! We were nearing my destination and I became exceedingly nervous. I went to the conductor and poured my tale of woe into his sympathetic ear. He kindly consented to ask Engineer Turner to slow down at Coesse and let me off. I presume he was as good as his word, but if there was any reduction in the speed of the train, I failed to detect it. When we reached the platform I dropped. After rolling over a dozen times and filling my body with splinters I brought up suddenly in the midst of a lot of fruit boxes. At that instant the rear car whizzed by and Brakeman Johnny Page sang out: 'Be careful there, you'll tear your clothes!'

"It was a terrible lonely place—not a living thing in sight except millions of flies that hovered over the watermelon rinds which were scattered over the platform. I sat down upon an empty chicken coop to pick the splinters out of my anatomy. Before the surgical operation was half completed the sun sank below the horizon. Then the awful quiet of the place was suddenly disturbed by the croaking of thousands of frogs in a neighboring pond, while from his perch upon a tombstone in the grave yard adjacent to the depot a screech owl sent forth his ear-piercing, hair-raising notes. A feeling of homesickness began to creep over me and I set out in search of the station agent. I found that worthy in a 6x8 coop in the rear of the waiting room, fast asleep, with his hat tilted forward, displaying a bald spot on his head. I wrapped on his desk and he sprang up in alarm, stared at me for a moment, then examined my credentials and invited me to make myself at home. Then he said: 'I'm sick and tired of this business. The work's enough to kill a mule, but it's the injustice and lack of appreciation that makes me hot. You can't pick up a paper without seeing a lot of 'rot' about the heroism of love motive engineers and the awful responsibility that makes train dispatchers hump-shouldered before their time, but never a single, solitary word about station agents. Why, to read the papers, a person would think an engineer went through life with his eyeglued to the rail and a death grip on the reversing lever, and that the train dispatcher had to put in all his spare time sopping his head with hair vigor to keep from turning gray in a single night. But look at the facts.

"Any track walker can tell you an engineer is asleep more than half the time when on the line, and that the only way to call his attention to a slow flag or a stop signal is to heave a rock through a cab window, while as for a train dispatcher, we all know what he is—a petty tyrant with his eight hour trick, whose most arduous duties consist in rambling in poor wretches out on the line, bulldozing us into sending him a regular tribute of fruit, fresh eggs and butter. Heroism! Responsibility!! Well, if that ain't enough to give a person a distaste for strong drink!" And he disappeared in the direction of a saloon about a half mile down the road.

"When he returned he gave me an idea of my duties as assistant agent.

"You're familiar with the interstate tariffs and the transcontinental classifications, I suppose?" he said.

I was obliged to confess my ignorance.

"That's bad," he replied. "You better sit right down and familiarize yourself with them. You'll find 'em all in those files. Besides the tariffs there's 724 supplements and 1,947 amendments in addition to 2,786 circulars that you should post up on. Then there's the special commodity rates and the modified rulings as applied to the different tariffs and the new rulings there's 489 of 'em—that have appeared since the last classification was issued. After you get all those down pat it would be well to devote a little time to the local classification and tariffs—learn the terminal points and get the routing instructions committed to memory. Hello! there's that freight coming at last. Tell 'em there's nothing for 'em. I've got to go across the street and collect some bills—you can check out any freight they've got." And again he withdrew.

The conductor walked in and said: "Ask 'im if he's got anything for No. 70."

I put the question to the train dispatcher over the wire, and he answered: "No," very plainly and distinctly. After a while the train pulled out and I was looking for the "soup ticket" to report them when the train dispatcher began calling the office.

I answered and he said: 'Get No. 70."

"They're gone."

"Stop 'em!"

"I say they're gone."

"Fetch 'em back!"

"They're gone, I s—"

"Shut that key and go and bring that train back for orders."

I closed the key and wandered aimlessly put on the platform in the vague hope of seeing the agent or that something might happen. To my surprise I saw that the freight had stopped at the other end of the yard about three-quarters of a mile away. I could still hear the dispatcher calling and knew by the vicious sound of the instruments that he was mad. Thoughts of collisions and the possibility of being responsible for a terrible accident flashed across my mind, and I started for that train on a run. The distance was greater than I had imagined, and I was completely blown when I came up with it. Conductor Charlie Amen was lying on his back under the car fixing something about the air brake. I managed to grasp out that the train dispatcher wanted him for orders.

"Tell him to go to thunder," shouted the conductor and then calmly continued his labor. As there seemed nothing else to be done I started back, and had gone but a short distance when the engine passed me backing up to the office. It was going too fast for me to board it, so the conductor and engineer had been waiting ten minutes or more when I eventually reached the station.

"If it's all the same to you, pardner, said Mr Amen with freezing politeness, "we'd just as soon get out of here. We've got families at the other end of the run and 'ud like to get there before they grow out of our remembrance."

I walked into the office and told the dispatcher that I had stopped the train.

"Why don't you be all day about it?" he answered. "There's nothing for them, it's too late to help 'em any now."

I was afraid of the condition he was in I told him this. His jaw fell, and for fully a minute he gazed at me in round eyed horror, then rushed from the office and yelled to Engineer Quinn: "Get a move on yourself! Git out of here before he has another fit!"

After that it was comparatively quiet for awhile. I made a feeble effort to understand something of the classification but soon gave up the attempt as hopeless. One or two lots of light and express came in, and a couple of trains passed without accident. I was beginning to think I was getting on to the business when the agent returned. He looked more careworn than ever as he sank wearily into the one chair the office afforded.

"Well, how are you makin' it?" he asked, and I stated that so far the progress seemed satisfactory.

Next he looked at the way bills and wanted to know if I had unloaded that cow yet.

"No," I answered, "not yet."

"Not yet!" he shrieked. "Great Scott, man, what do sections 4,368, 87 and 88 of the revised statutes of the United States, and section 2, chapter 3, of the act of April 3, 1878, say?"

I was about to confess my ignorance, but he stopped me.

"Don't waste any more precious time, get that critter unloaded before any one sees her. She's been in the car over thirty six hours, and we're liable to $500 fine."

The cow was unloaded immediately. When I returned to the office he called my attention to a bill of ninety-eight cents I had collected on a washing machine.

"You corrected that bill before you collected it, I hope?"

"Corrected it? No. What's wrong?"

"Oh, a mere trifle, that comes under the interstate commerce law, and by overcharging thirteen cents you've laid us liable for a fine of $5,000 or two years in the penitentiary or both, that's all. See what circular 2,201 says: 'Agents who violate any of the provisions of the interstate commerce law will themselves be personally liable to the penalties imposed thereby.' Ignorance of the law is no excuse for its violation. That's soothing, ain't it?" And here's a case of brandy you have forwarded to Iowa, a prohibition state. That's another misdemeanor, but thank God, we can probably escape to the hills before the authorities get on to it."

He sprang from his chair, and began pacing the floor, muttering to himself "Oh, no: there's no heroism required to run a station, no responsibility attached to the position. Fines are laid up for you, jails and penitentiaries yawn for you, but that's nothing; that's merely the every day routine."

He caught sight of the express book and stopped short.

"Those quails," he faltered, looking at me imploringly. "You examined each bird as the law directs to see that it had not been captured by a net, pound, weir or trap. You know rule eighty-six says agents must acquaint themselves with and be governed by the game laws of their state or territory."

I could not speak but he read the answer in my downcast face. He extended his hand to me, while a look of sublime exaltation transfigured his homely countenance.

"As the agent," he said, "I am responsible for your terrible crimes—I am forever undone, but I bear you no malice, it was fate—whatever happens remember I forgive you—but," and he jammed his hat down over his ears and his eyes glared wildly, "they will never take me alive."

"Then he strode out of the office and disappeared.

The sun sank below the western horizon, and twilight and mosquitoes invaded the melancholy landscape.

Presently a freight train came along and halted before the office. It so happened that an empty box car stopped right opposite the office, and, and as I gazed into its hospitably open door, a great homesickness and yearning stole over me. For a moment I hesitated, but a scream of mortal anguish reached my ears from the direction of the saloon and decided me.

Softly closing the office door I crept into the untenanted car, and when the engineer had "taken up the slack" and pulled out of Coesse, my career as an assistant agent was at an end.

Fragrant, clean, inexpensive, and never failing; they fully meet all the requirements of a household remedy, and should always be kept on hand. For the relief and cure of weak back, weak muscles, lameness, stiff and enlarged joints, pains in the chest, small of back and around the hips, strains, stitches, and all local pains, Allcock's Porous Plasters are unequalled.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

"John Anderson, My Joe,"

In the Scotch ballad, was about to totter down the declivity of life with his aged wife. How it would have smoothed the rough places for the respected John and his venerable spouse could they have tested their growing infirmities with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that benign help to the aged, the weak and those whose nerves and vitality are exhausted by disease. When the lamp of life is on the wane man specially requires medical aid, a stimulating tonic, a wholesome carminative. The aged and the feeble are particularly susceptible to influences which produce pernicious constipation to too often interrupted by a relapse. This standard American invigorant is quite adapted to the needs of such persons, and it always fulfils its office. Dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, kidney troubles and la grippe are among the troubles that it overcomes.
